DETAILED ACTION

Applicant's election with traverse of Group I in the reply filed on 20 April 2007 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that tiling and low-resolution functions are similar and would not be a search burden. This is found persuasive and the restriction requirement is hereby withdrawn. Claims 1-44 are pending and examined herein.

Priority

Priority to US Provisional Applications 60/456, 680, filed 20 March 2003 and 60/456,912, filed 21 March 2003 is hereby acknowledged.

Information Disclosure Statement

The Information Disclosure Statements filed 9 August 2004, 4 October 2004, and 3 May 2006 have been considered in full. Signed copies of PTO forms 1449 are included with this Office Action.

Drawings

The drawings submitted 19 March 2004 are accepted.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-44 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 1, 22, 26, and 32 are drawn to a method for estimating a thickness of a wall of a lumen from an image of a lumen comprising steps that do not include a physical transformation of matter. As emphasized by the New Interim Guidelines the claims will be evaluated for providing a practical application. A practical application is claimed if the claimed invention physically transforms an article or physical object to a different state or thing, or if the claimed invention otherwise produces a concrete, tangible, and useful result. In the instant case, a physical transformation of matter is not provided, as the instant claims merely encompass non-physical (i.e. in-silico) method steps which do not result in a physical transformation of matter.

Therefore, the claims must be evaluated for providing a practical application that produces a concrete, tangible and useful result. The focus is not on the steps taken to achieve a particular result, but rather the final result achieved by the claimed invention. A claim may be statutory where it recites a result that is concrete (i.e. reproducible), tangible (i.e. communicated to a user), and useful (i.e. a specific and substantial). In the instant case, the do not recite a tangible result such that it is useful to one skilled in the art. For these reasons, the instant claims are not statutory.

Claims 21 and 35 are drawn to a memory medium and a system for estimating a thickness of a wall of a lumen from an image of a lumen. In the instant claims the “medium” or an “system”, constitute nonfunctional descriptive material, as no requisite functionality is present to satisfy the practical application requirement. Merely claiming nonfunctional descriptive material, i.e. abstract ideas, stored in a computer-readable medium, in a computer, does not make the claims statutory. Further, data structures, as in a “program” are descriptive material, per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing a functional change in the computer. See, e.g., Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Computer programs are viewed as computer listings, per se, i.e., the description or expression of the programs, are not physical things. They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not “acts” being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the other claimed elements of a computer that permit that computer program’s functionality to be realized.

This rejection could be overcome by amending the claims to recite that a result of the method is “displayed” or “outputted” (e.g. output to a user, a display, a memory, or another computer, etc.), or by amending the claims to include a step of a physical transformation of matter (e.g. assay), provided such is supported in the specification as originally filed. For an updated discussion of statutory considerations with regard to non- functional descriptive material and computer-related inventions, see the Guidelines for Patent Eligible Subject Matter in the MPEP 2106, Section IV.
